

New Single, Album and Tour by Highlands music phenomenon Tide Lines

Formed in 2016, Tide Lines are a phenomenal Scottish success story. While their music is heavily influenced by, and rooted in, the Highland places they grew up, they produce a highly eclectic sound. Imagine a 70's Bruce Springsteen and the E-Street band, but with bagpipes and electronics, and you're probably just about there! They have racked up in excess of 350,000 single track streams across Spotify, Apple Music etc and debut single Far Side of the World has had over 250,000 views on youtube. Their debut 2018 Celtic Connections show (3 Feb, at St Luke's) sold out in under 24 hours.

They are about to embark on a Scottish tour in March and have a new single – Streets of Dreamers – released on 2 Feb (with an official launch in Glasgow on 22 Jan). Streets of Dreamers is a big anthemic sound with a typically hooky chorus, with a beautiful yearning that calls to mind some of the best of the Proclaimers.

Initially formed by ex-Skipinnish members Robert Robertson (singer) and Ross Wilson (piano), Tide Lines emerged just over a year ago with the addition of Alasdair Turner (guitar & bagpipes) and Fergus Munro (drums). They released their Far Side of the World single in 2016 and its lyrical theme - the connection between youth and location - formed the basis for their first full length album: Dreams We Never Lost, which featured original Waterboy and current Saw Doctor, Anthony Thistlewaite (released 2017).

Having already established a firm fan base at home, Tide Lines have been attracting the eye of music fans in Europe and 2017 closed out with the band having played to audiences in Germany, France and Switzerland, with plans for 2018 including headline slots at HebCelt and Belladrum, several UK festivals, UK tour in autumn (TBA), and possible world domination!
